WOMEN HELPING WOMEN

WITH DEEDEE FREEMAN

Q: This year marks your 25th year leading Spirit of Faith Christian Center. How have you seen God use the mission and vision of the church to transform families and communities?

A: We have witnessed the greatest miracle of all, the transformation from spiritual death to life as countless thousands have received Christ. We also have seen marriages restored as we have used our own life story to teach others how to apply the Word of God to have restoration in their marriages. We support missions; we have community events where we give away food, clothes, and school supplies. SOFCC is very involved with our local schools. We have health fairs for the church and the community so they can come and get free exams and teeth screenings. Spirit of Faith partners have come together to buy cars and pay mortgages. A little over a year ago, we started a Sunday noon service called ECHO (Expanding Church Order) for the millennials. My daughter Brelyn and son-in-law, Kevin, are over that service, and it has grown close to 800 in one year.

Q: In addition to leading a growing church, you're also a wife, mother, and grandmother. How do you balance these responsibilities with your ministry commitments to make sure your family stays healthy and strong?

A: The Bible tells us to seek first the Kingdom of God, and all other things will be added unto me. It is the grace of God in my life that allows me to handle the multiple hats that have been given to me. All of my family work together with us in ministry, so they've been raised in the church and understand that putting God first makes everything else work together for our good. I've never tried to "balance." When we balance, we give more weight to one thing over another. So as a wife, a mother, and a leader of our church, I've relied entirely on the Holy Spirit to guide me in prioritizing my life. The Bible says he who lacks wisdom, let him ask and the Father will give it to him liberally. I rely entirely on the wisdom of God.

Q: What role do women play in developing a faith-based marriage and family life that influences and creates change in the world around us?

A: A woman's role should be to support the mandate or vision of the house. Some would want to fight this because they don't understand that submission doesn't mean control, but rather to support and back the mission. I realize that my vision and what I want in life is connected to my husband's. And when I support his vision, my vision moves too. It's about teamwork for me.

Two are better than one, and when we work together, we can accomplish anything. I often call myself the incubator to my husband's vision, so I make sure through prayer and encouragement that he sticks to what he has placed in me. My attitude and life as it relates to being a wife have impacted women everywhere, even in my house with my two girls. So, as a wife touches the lives of her family, they in-turn can affect the lives of others.

Q: Next month, you'll be speaking at the I Am Woman Conference, which airs on Daystar June 8th and 9th. Can you give us a sneak peek of your message?

A: About four years ago, my husband was attacked with sickness and the doctors gave us no hope. The ordeal in the natural would have been unbearable for most, but through my husband's teachings on faith, I stood without being shaken. God gave me the assignment to teach everywhere I go, "How to Focus on the Promise and Not the Process." Yes, I know that there is a process that we must go through, but it's time to focus on what we are going to and not going through.

Q: Your passion for helping battered women has led you to start a transitional home called Dee's House of Hope. Describe how this project will help women escape violence and abuse.

A: Dee's House of Hope will be a safe haven, or as I call it a "GRACE PLACE" of healing and restoration. Women and their children will be able to come and get the tools necessary to lead self-supporting, purposeful lives. We will offer counseling, job training, and employment placement to ensure that they can go back into the world confidently, fulfilling the role God originally intended for them.

Q: The latest headlines in the news have highlighted women's issues around the world. How should the church be responding?

A: The church should be praying just like we have been commissioned to do for the state of our society. Then, we need to be addressing real issues and having real conversations in the church and not ignoring it as if it will go away. It's past time that we educate our children about the problems they will be presented with and how to overcome them. Sexual misconduct, sadly, is not just the world's issue. It's also in the church. As the Church, we need to become the answer and not a part of the problem.

Painting with PURPOSE

Over the years, I've come to think of motherhood as an opportunity to create a work of art. With each brushstroke, carefully guided by the Holy Spirit, I've made it my mission to paint the truth of God's love on the canvas of my children's hearts.

In Proverbs 22:6, it says, "Point your kids in the right direction - when they're old they won't be lost." That's a powerful promise for every parent! The many movements of your brush may not be perfect, but they can always point to the One who is. Even our mistakes can provide teachable moments for our kids that success could never inspire. Don't let past failures discourage you from speaking life over their destiny!

Through many seasons of life, I continued to paint with purpose. Not knowing how the end result would look, I trusted that if the Word of God remained my source, the picture would always reflect His grace, goodness, and mercy.

Looking at their lives now, I see it. The brushstrokes on each one tell a story of faith. They form an intricate map showing me where they've been and where they're going. Not every path they've taken has led to peace, but I'm thankful to God that painting with His love and pointing them to Jesus means they'll never be lost.

THE CALL OF THE PROPHETS

Many are called and few are chosen to walk in the office of the prophet. I suppose most would agree that it is one of the most difficult offices to fill. Because of this, many have refused to take up this mantle.

However, I hear the Spirit saying, "Where are My prophets? Where are those who are willing to become nothing that I might be all things?" The greatest end-time harvest is upon us and the prophets must set the stage. They must cry out to prepare the people to be ready in this hour.

The Scripture is very clear. God has said, "Surely the Lord GOD will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets. The lion hath roared, who will not fear? The Lord GOD hath spoken, who can but prophesy?" (Amos 3:7-8 KJV)

God has always used His prophets, and these final days will be no different.

I hear the cry of the Spirit saying, "Rise up, My prophets. Put on the mantle of the Spirit and prophesy in this hour. Prophecy that which I speak without fear or favor. It is our time to run in the Spirit. Lift up your voice. Cry out and spare not. Your judge is not of this world, for I alone will judge you in that day to know whether you have been faithful to speak, faithful to cry out to a lost world and warn My people of the things to come."
